Dear colleague,

Thank you for your interest in coverage by the International Political Science Abstracts. We have reviewed recent issues on your website and seen only a few articles that would come within our purview, despite the evident importance of the subjects covered. Given our very small staff, we have to be very selective in what we cover: we focus on articles that we think are pertinent for researchers in Political Science and proximate disciplines. We believe that among the strengths of the Abstracts is this focus, which facilitates more efficient research.

Going by previous issues, it does not seem likely that we would be able to select more than one or two per year from your journal. However, if you still wish us to cover the Review of Human Rights, we would need you to create a complimentary subscription for the print edition, to be sent regularly upon publication to:

Some of the abstracts we were able to read were very long; we hope these can be kept to the international standard of 125-130 words maximum. The purpose is to encourage the researcher to go to the full text to read the author's work in its entirety. Please add this parameter to your instructions for authors. We point out that all abstracts are subject to professional editing for clarity and brevity.

Please complete the authorization form below and return it to us at this address <ipsa-aisp@sciencespo.fr>, where any future communication should be addressed.

I agree to place the International Political Science Abstracts on our complimentary mailing list, until further notice. Permission is hereby granted to International Political Science Abstracts to print abstracts published in our journal and make them available through both the print edition (published by Sage) and the IPSA database (on the EBSCO and Ovid websites.)
